I once remember laying in my bed on a journey to the mid-west, the night was warm and barmy and the humidity had been high, I felt lonely being so far away from my home, but as the clock struck 2am, I opened the window to the world outside and gazed out upon the ambience, the sounds of the night took my attention, the smoothness of a time free from humanity, I felt soothed, assured and calmed by this experience, so I went back to bed and fell into a calm peace filled sleep.

I so wished I would have had this amazing composition with me at that time, as it would have been the perfect sound track for that event. Asleep with Windows Open is one of the most gentle and kindly compositions I think I have ever heard from the artist.

Her keyboards create something so redolent of the subject matter, so much so I have now played this track 3 times and not even realised it. Its sensitive calming narrative must make this one of the best ambient singles I have heard this year so far.
