It's been a pleasure to have watched the growth of many female pianists over the last few years and one of those artists who has excelled and literally gone from strength to strength is none other than the crafted genius of passionate tone in Annie Locke.

Her latest single A Perfect Love has an abundance of heart and honesty built into the weave of a blissful composition, in style it reminds me of the gentle influences of the UK's Mike Rowland back in the 90's; but Locke seems to excel with each and every arrangement and one can see with ease that her fans, followers and listeners are going to be dancing with delight at this brand new offering, a wonderful heart felt release from the pianist and on that should with ease usher in another huge hit for her.
